an internet sensation after he was brought to Disney World by his owners. An Indiana woman got an unexpected lesson on the dangers of keeping exotic animals as pets during her visit to Walt Disney World Resort with her family.
Janet Tardiff was bringing her nine-year-old son to Orlando to celebrate his birthday when they decided to take an off-site tour of the resort with a private Disney World tour guide. The family had been visiting Disney World for about a year with a different guide and they decided to continue to use the same tour guide because they liked his style, according to Tardiff. They were set to visit the Tiger Mountain Premier Camp which houses leopards, cheetahs, and other exotic animals. The family was given the opportunity to meet with the animals and was told that the animals were in a secure area away from guests. They were also told that the animals were trained to be kept inside cages, according to Tardiff. However, the family was surprised to learn that the exotic animals were not in a secure area. They found a pathway that led to a cage that had a cheetah inside. “We walked into the tiger camp area and our private Disney World tour guide told us that 2d92ce491b
