the.7z file is missing error, despite being available in other parts of the torrent, so if you know how to work around this, then make sure you can help. for my money, the airbrush is too similar to the twinbird and if you look at it closely, you'll find it's actually a modified twinbird and not a proper airbrush, and airbrushes aren't made anymore. i think the whole edition and release schedule is weird. a bit like the dreamhack edition. One thing that I noticed, is that "Ingame Printer" only works for decks in the "Aperture Labs" folder, it doesn't seem to work for decks in the sub folders. It worked for the decks in "Aperture Labs" and "Rubber Stamp" but when I created a new folder "Rubber Stamp" and tried to print with the same Printer, it didn't work, it gave an error that there's no printer. It is strange that the error is only for folders other than "Aperture Labs". I am pretty sure the folder structure should not matter, but still, weird bug. I'm glad the weather is going to change soon and I have some time to get myself organized in the new year. Like many, I've taken my time and looked into different programs to find the perfect workflow and piece of software. I've tried about half a dozen different things and it seems that they all have their place, but they can't work the way I do. I'm not opposed to trying new things, but I want it to work the way I'm used to. I don't want to keep switching programs because one doesn't meet my needs. I always have my copy of After Effects and I have been using it for a long time. Originally I purchased After Effects with version CS5 on my old iMac, and I've been using the program ever since. Now that I have a new Mac Pro, I realized that I wanted to try Aperture because the file format is native to the new computer and I could share my work with others. I actually started my career in post production. I was a producer for one of the biggest gaming companies in the world and used
