"The truth is not only to be found in books, but in living men, who are to be followed and not to be followed." -ConfuciusQ: Git push to master but origin doesn't show new commits I have a local branch called user1 and I'm working on a feature and I wanted to push it to master. But when I do git push origin master, it shows the last three commits on master but origin doesn't show new commits. Is there anything wrong? A: You can try git fetch and git rebase origin/master to get current commit into your local master. When you git push origin master it actually sends to remote (origin) and also any already pushed local commits. But if you want to push your own commit to remote then you have to git fetch first and then git rebase origin/master. Update: If you have the latest git version (1.7.10) then you can avoid all the above hassle and just do git push --all.
