These are some of the highlights: We have implemented the ability to declare a milestone from a project in the Milestone project page. In other words, the Milestone object and the Milestone project can now be created and managed together within projects. Milestones now have a default cost for most project statuses. This will be useful for determining the most efficient way to spend project resources. (This feature is being implemented for FTE / Manager pairs, but there is a generic cost for all projects.) Milestones are now being included in the Project Monitor and a new Milestone module is being added to the project web area. (New milestones are being added to the project web area as soon as the project is saved. You do not need to open and save the Milestone project page to add new milestones to it.) Please try out these features and let us know what you think. We have implemented a lot of new functions in Milestones in the last few months and we've also added a lot of new features. We know that Milestones is a powerful tool for project management, but that comes with a learning curve, and we're here to help you through that. We hope you enjoy these new features and will continue to contact us with any feedback you have. On the molecular electrostatic potentials of some biologically important molecules: the polyenes. The molecular electrostatic potentials (MEP) of cyclopentadienes, cyclohexadienes and cyclooctatetraene have been calculated using the HF/6-31G*

and HF/6-31G*d* methods. The geometry of these compounds have been optimized using HF/6-31G* and HF/6-31G*d*. The relevant stationary points on the MEP surfaces were characterized by a natural bond order (NBO) analysis. In the case of cyclopentadienes, the origin of the regular behaviour of MEP is located close to the central carbon atom. For cyclohexadienes, there are two
