I am a newbie to scala and am developing an interactive teaching application that enables users to manipulate a model. I have an object that contains a mutable list. Whenever the users types for example, print the contents of the list I sometimes get the following error message: Error:(61, 22) no method setList case class Model(x:List[Node]) { ^ My questions are: How does scala handle (and recognize) changes to mutable variables? Why does it fail in this case and not in other cases? I am using scala 2.10.3 and sbt-idea 0.6.3. A: For your first question, you would have to explain what you mean by handle changes, but I guess the answer is just 'not handle changes' :- ) 2 5 W h i c h i s t h e b i g g e s t v a l u e ?
