osa reviews:ddr3any faster?none/no improvement at all!any other changes in kernel?-- Main reason for not fixing the problem is that I want to keep the fastest possible GPU drivers. But with AMD support for my card being 5 years old I have no intention of using anything else for the next few years. There is little chance I am going to buy anything else but AMD for at least a couple of years. I intend to keep my current card for a long time. My guess is AMD is sitting on the oldest cards and just don't care to release the old ones. I really don't have the time to track down the cards and test whether the new drivers still have the problem, and if so, what's the status on the bug. Just installed AMD 6.38.xx. In Playon my images are not shown properly, instead, they are in white. That is the output of my system, instead of green. Jari-Matti Hi jari-matti, I'm not sure what you mean by images are not shown properly. The colors of the time bar will change if you choose another color scheme from the dropdown. Or did you mean that the images aren't shown? There is no problem with the selected default color scheme. The problem occurs with the light blue one. And in PlayOn it looks like you can't see the video image at all. What can you see instead? Tom I downloaded it from the AMD website and installed it. I tested with the color scheme I want to use, but I still have the same problem. Tibor Tom, I have the same problem, the image is showing all white. Thomasthek I have a problem with the shadows. When I click on shadows to change them, a lot of time it freezes (for 30 or so seconds) with the mouse pointer frozen and not clickable. I have to close the window and reopen it. Has anyone else seen this? Tom, it seems that the shadows and graphics are not properly integrated. I can set the shadow level on the players and the view, but it's not always changing the player view. Also, I'm having problems with the menu colors. It seems that the color scheme settings are only applying to the main view, and
