PhD Thesis Report A Description of the Current Research I am currently working on is to develop an improved LBS which can be used as a cell phone. The aim of the current research is to develop the current LBS into a cellular phone which is capable of accessing a 3G wireless network which is offered by the Vodafone. This current research consists of several steps which are as follows: First of all, the current research is aimed at developing a prototype. This prototype should be able to display images and web pages. After the prototype has been developed, a few focus groups will be conducted. The focus groups will involve a number of people and will help to find out how the LBS should be. I also plan to be the first person to use this prototype for a few months. After this, I plan to take part in a few other focus groups and to present the findings from the focus groups to potential investors. The main objective of this phase of the current research is to find out the cost for investors to set up a factory for the production of this cell phone. After the factory has been produced, I plan to further test it for a few months and will also further test it to find out whether it is reliable or not. If it is, I will further test it to find out what improvements should be made to it. Current Research Working on my thesis I am developing a guide for students to help them improve their Maths. The aims of this guide are to allow the students to use their brains more effectively, to
