It is one of the oldest African American newspapers in Chicago. History The Village News was first published in October 1931 by a group of residents who met weekly to work on the paper. The paper was delivered by newsboys, but it was printed at J.J. Ferguson's print shop on 75th and Morgan, in what is now Bronzeville. The Village News initially had no official editor, with each member of the editorial board having a different job, including as a domestic worker, a maid, a nurse, and a barber. As the paper grew in popularity, the group decided that it would be more efficient for them to have a single editor, so in 1936 they appointed a committee to search for a new editor. The new editor, Lester Ellis, had been working on the paper since 1930. He was hired on a weekly wage of $1.00, and was given the title of "editor." In 1944, the Village News began publishing three times a week, a change that reflected the paper's growing popularity. In 1945, the paper became a tabloid. In 1959, the paper began delivering to residents of Lakeview. The Village News had a circulation of 7,000 copies in the 1930s. In 1980, it had a circulation of 20,000 copies, but as of 2000, that number had declined
